PREFACE.

The series of rolls known as Charter Rolls begins with the first year of King John and extends to the eighth year of King Henry VIII. After the latter date, the charter, strictly so-called, was only used in rare cases, chiefly if not entirely for the conferring of titles of honour; and such charters were enrolled upon the Patent Roll. The latest charter known to have passed the great seal was that by which, in 1620, Charles, son of King James I, was created Prince of Wales.

The entries upon the Charter Rolls comprise grants and confirmations of liberties, privileges, offices, dignities, lands and pensions to corporations and individuals, civil and ecclesiastical. All these subjects were of course equally dealt with by Letters Patent; but the entries of a judicial and administrative nature, which make up a large part of the Patent Rolls, are almost wholly wanting from the Charter Rolls. In form, a Charter is distinguished from Letters Patent by the salutation clause addressed to Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots, Earls, Barons and so forth, the list of dignitaries enumerated varying from time to time; by the quare volumus clause; and also by the enumeration at the close of the names of attesting witnesses; it was originally stated to be given by the hand of the chancellor or his deputy; but from the year 1227, when King Henry III took the seal into his own hands, the final clause has normally run, Data per manum nostram apud &c. die &c. The main body of the document differs in no way from Letters Patent dealing with a similar subject. It should be noticed that the issue of a charter generally implies the presence of the King.
There is at present no satisfactory guide to the contents of the Charter Rolls subsequent to the reign of King John. Copies or abstracts of entries relating to particular subjects have from time to time been made, and many such collections may be found in the British Museum and elsewhere. Many monastic chartularies have been printed by learned societies or by independent antiquaries; and the charters of many towns have been made accessible in the same way. Some attempt has been made to give references to such sources in the present volume; but in the absence of any general list of printed charters, a complete system of references is unattainable. A list of books referred to in this volume is given herewith. But it must be repeated that neither the authorities cited nor the references to them are exhaustive.

The only approach to a general account of the contents of the Charter Rolls is the Calendarium Rotulorum Chartarum printed in 1803 by the Record Commission from a MS. apparently written in the reign of James I. This is supposed to give the name of the person in whose favour each charter was issued, and a list of the places mentioned in the charter. The original MS. was, however, both incomplete and inaccurate; and no attempt was made to supply these defects by comparison with the original rolls.

The following portions of the series have been printed in a form accessible to students.

In 1837, the Record Commission published a Latin transcript, with contractions literatim, of the Charter Rolls of the reign of John, with a valuable introduction by Mr. Thomas Duffus Hardy.

In 1885, M. Francisque Michel, in a volume entitled 'Rôles Gascons,' published an extended Latin transcript of some short rolls of the reign of Henry III, containing the enrolments of charters issued by the king while abroad; and in 1890 and 1896 two further volumes were published by M. Charles Bémont. These volumes form part of the Documents Inédits published in Paris by the Ministry of Public Instruction.

The object of the present undertaking is to provide an English Calendar of the Charter Rolls from the reign of Henry III to that of Henry VIII inclusive. In its general lines the present calendar resembles the Calendar of Patent Rolls now in course of publication, and follows the rules laid down in the Introduction to the volume of that Calendar dealing with the first four years of Edward III. It will accordingly only be necessary here to specify the few points where a different system has been employed.

The smaller bulk of the rolls has made it unnecessary to omit any of the entries. On the other hand, it has not been found possible to include in the present Calendar the names of the attesting witnesses. To have added them at the end of each charter would have involved intolerable repetition. They have accordingly been reserved for separate treatment in connexion with a proposed itinerary of the Kings of England.

It should be pointed out that the language used in many charters is often taken verbatim from a charter of earlier date. So much is this the case in the early rolls of Henry III, that some of the charters there enrolled consist simply of a charter of some earlier king, altered, where needful, to suit the fresh date given to it. Where possible these charters have been dealt with by reference in the Calendar to the earlier charter used; when this could not be discovered, they have been abstracted in the usual manner. After the first few years, charters of this kind are for the most part replaced by charters of Inspeximus. In dealing with these it has been thought desirable to print in full all charters of kings earlier than Henry III that are not known to have been printed already. A few other charters which seemed of special interest, or which presented difficulties of interpretation or transcription, have been treated in the same way.

The text has been prepared, under my immediate supervision, by Mr. R. D. Trimmer, an Assistant Record Keeper, and Mr. C. G. Crump, of the Public Record Office, and the latter has compiled the Indexes.

LIST OF CHARTERS PRINTED IN FULL.

The following list shows all the charters printed in full in the present volume. They have been arranged, as far as possible, in chronological order. The limits of date assigned to the undated charters might often have been narrowed by plausible conjectures. But it has been thought best to make use of dates less liable to objection.

Aug. 12. Shrewsbury. Inspectimus and confirmation of a chirograph, made on the morrow of St. James, 25 Henry III, in the court of the king at Gloucester in the presence of Stephen de Segrave, John son ot Geoffrey, Jeremy de Kaxton, then justices of the king, and others, for the settlement of the plea moved between Walter de Clifford, son of Walter de Clifford, and Agnes de Guidi on the one part, and brother Stephen, the abbot, and the convent of Dore on the other, touching lands and pastures in Canterselif, whereby the said Walter gave up, for himself and his heirs, to St. Mary and the abbot and monks of Dore, all his lands of Wendor and Nanlegius, disafforested, with all free customs thereto belonging, to be by them and their men tilled, essarted, enclosed, and dealt with at their pleasure, with pastures, commons, and other liberties pursuant to the charters of the said Walter and his ancestors. And for the settlement of disputes as to the boundaries, the said Walter admits that the land of Wendor runs from Blainterberburh, where Caleturmura rises, along the confines of Buedth on the west side as far as the Wye, and again from the head of Keleturmura going down and dividing by the same stream on the south side to the Wye; and the metes of the monks' land of Nanlegius begin, where Nantmanagh falls into Kaleturboghan, and run up that stream to the head of Nantmanagh, which is between Warlichkey and Epyn, and thence run in a straight line westward to the head of Kaleturboghan, which rises on the upper part of Southwe, and thence straight to the Flemish way (via Flendeones), which divides the land of the monks from the land of Madoc Bochan of Ginnog, and along that road to the place called Sham, where Nankarterek rises, and down that stream to the point, where it falls into Kaleturboghan, and thence down Kaleturboghan, to the point where Nantmanagh falls into it. All these lands by the said metes the said monks may enclose and put in defense; nor shall any from Kanterselsifi or elsewhere with any beasts have common within these lands, save upon the mountains of Epyn without the said bounds, since they have taken all these lands from the free forest of the said Walter and his ancestors; and if any deer be killed therein by the men or dogs of the said monks, it shall be taken to the grange of Wendor, and reported to the bailiffs of Brentles, that they may remove it thence, and neither the monks nor their men shall be troubled therefor; the nests of sparrow-hawks shall belong to the said Walter; but the beasts of the monks shall not be troubled on that account, nor their shepherds molested. Moreover the said monks and their servants shall have free entry, exit, and passage through the land of Kanteself with their chattels by all roads and paths where other men have been wont to go. Moreover the said Walter restores to the said monks all that part of Epyn, which lies between the way, which runs to the cross of Yorwerth (Ecuem Yorwerth), and the wood of his forest, which he formerly included in the forest in violation of their charters. And since there was dispute between the said Walter and the monks touching the common of the whole land of the said Walter, as contained in their charters, it is defined to be pasture only for their beasts and for their sheep of Troscoit and Wardevoc over all the land between Trevret and Loundeslans, as far as Kesin, and thence as far as Kalturbohan and so up by Nankartatherek to the Flemish way, saving the corn and meadows of his men, who have lands in the said pasture. Moreover the said Walter restores to the said monks pasture and common in wood and herbage of all his lands which lie south of the Flemish way, the bounds running along that way to the boundary of Gomot, and thence along another road which runs down to Riebreckeynoe, and so down to the head of Duveleys, and thence to Tuchlarduvleys, so that within these metes the monks shall have free pasture also for their stud (equitium) when it comes thither, and so that they may take in the wood what they require for the granges of Troscoit and Wardevoc for building, for fuel and for making hedges; but without those bounds they shall have no claim to common, or husbot, or heibot. Nor ought the said Walter or his heirs to alienate or diminish the land with these metes, so far as the monks’ pasture is concerned. And the foregoing lands and common the said Walter has granted to the said monks in frank almoin, in wood and open, without any diminution.
